Fund manager's commentary

Stocks fell during February in response to stronger-than-anticipated US wage growth data. President Trump's fiscal easing at a time of near-full employment and steady economic growth may engender speedier increases in inflation and interest rates. Investors may in turn switch from equities into safer assets such as cash and short-dated bonds. Global equities ended 1.09% down in sterling after a volatile month. UK equities underperformed, falling 3.38%. The EF Brompton Global Growth Fund benefited, however, from its relatively-low UK equity holdings and all investments outperformed. Schroder Recovery, down 0.18%, did best as inflation fears led investors to favour "value" stocks over more expensive "growth" companies. Equities in Europe excluding the UK fell 2.64% in sterling and regional investment increased on weakness through the addition of the iShares Europe Value Factor exchange-traded fund. Japanese equities outperformed, rising 1.67% as the yen gained 5.58% against sterling. Lindsell Train Japanese Equity outperformed, rising 7.39%, but sterling hedging held back GLG Japan CoreAlpha, which fell 3.93%. Some defensive assets posted gains. UK government bonds returned 0.26%, outperforming sterling corporate bonds, which fell 1.20%. Global bonds rose 2.29% in sterling, with the pound down 3.11% and 1.03% respectively against the dollar and the euro. The portfolio suffered, however, from the bias of its bond holdings away from gilts and unhedged overseas bonds. All the bond holdings fell, with Legg Mason Western Asset Macro Opportunities Bond weakest, falling 2.07%. The EF Brompton Global Growth Fund fell 1.45%† in February while the sector fell 1.59%.
